Saskatchewan's little-known Imperial Court

Pride. One of world's oldest and largest gay organizations gives back to community

JANE CAULFIELD
jane.caulfield@metronews.ca

When José Sarria won the Beaux Arts Ball in San Francisco in 1964 and declared that he, in drag, was "Empress of San Francisco," he inadvertently started something that would impact the international LGBT community for generations.

Sarria's declaration would be the foundation for the International Imperial Court System (ICS) — one of the oldest and largest gay organizations in the world.

"We all know we're men in dresses, but we're men in dresses raising money for a cause," said Saskatoon drag icon Simone DuVall, who was reigning empress in 2009-10.

The ICS is known for its elected officials with noble titles and hosting lavish events

Art and fashion show

Simone DuVall will be showing off some of the latest fashions from Saskatoon-based designers Melissa Squire and Reggie Sankey at Mosaic — A Celebration of Queer Artistry this evening at the Albert Community Centre.

"It is our opportunity to give back to our community. Every year the reigning emperor and empress get to pick their own charities. We do give to Regina Palliative Care every year, though," said DuVall.

DuVall added that the ICS has seen good support in Saskatchewan. "There have been a few organizations who have not wanted to work with us, but really — who doesn't want free money? We're raising the money, anyway; most organizations have been very grateful."

When discussing this year's pride festivities, DuVall said that Saskatchewan has the biggest heart.

"I see such a strong sense of community. But it's important to take a step back to remember what it was like 15 years ago, 20 years ago. I'm proud to be a part of something bigger."

This year's emperor and empress are Regina's Bruce and Avaughna Sanoir.

Roads will get worse despite more funds: City

Maintenance money.

To keep network from deteriorating, city would need about $18.5M a year, says infrastructure manager

morgan.modjeski@metronews.ca

City administration says roadwork infrastructure in Saskatoon will continue to deteriorate despite a funding jump in 2012.

This year, infrastructure spending on road work in the City of Saskatoon has increased to roughly $9.86 million, compared to $7 million in 2010 and $7.6 million in 2011, but city administration says it's still not enough.

"We're behind on the amount of money being spent rehabilitating our roadway network," said Mike Gutek, general manager of the city's infrastructure branch.

"With our current funding of roughly $6.5 million spent on rehabilitation, our roadway network is actually deteriorating in condition — it's getting worse every year."

Gutek said the city received a one-time increase of $3.47 million for roadwork over

Construction crews dig deep into Saskatoon's city streets just before the intersection of 45th Street West and Avenue C North. MORGAN MODJESKI/METRO previous years, but noted the funding is still half of what the city requires to maintain the roadway system.

"Our recommendations are to keep the roadway network from deteriorating — to hold it in its present state and not make it any better — and with current input costs, we would need about $18.5 million a year."

Even though more funding is needed, Gutek said council is working towards finding a solution. "We outlined a few methods of getting there and council is making progress," he said.

While the city is investing more money into roadwork infrastructure, resulting in more construction overall, Gutek said residents won't see too much of a difference on a day-to-day basis.

"It's dependent on the type of work," said Gutek. "If we're into just resurfacing, we can cover a lot of square footage really quick, but if the scope of the work involves going into water and sewage as well ... it can be a very long process."

The city also noted outside factors can contribute to challenges in maintaining Saskatoon's roadway system, as construction costs have increased by roughly 232 per cent from 2001 to 2011.

Fight for accreditation. Husband and wife doctors rely on retail work to get by

Lately, Jawaz Sheikh and Naheed Amin, both doctors from India, have been depending on their 24-year-old son to help pay the bills while battling to become accredited physicians in Saskatchewan.

The pair has roughly 25 years each of practising in India and Saudi Arabia.

Sheikh, who has worked at Walmart in Saskatoon, and Amin, who is managing a mobile-phone outlet store, have squandered their precious talents on menial labour. For physicians who previously served as rescue-operation doctors during the Gulf War in 1991, the contrast is marked.

"It has been difficult with a capital 'D.' It has been utter nerves and total chaos in the mind," said Amin. "Life couldn't be worse, honestly. I miss the satisfaction of seeing a patient and using the expertise and knowledge that I have. It's frustrating to see people out here who need doctors. They could use our help. It's a real sadness."

Do you know this man? Old photo in time capsule is a modern mystery

Unknown identity.

Officials are seeking the public's help to identify a man whose photograph was found in a time capsule in the legislature wall

A peek into the past has sparked a modern mystery in Saskatchewan.

Provincial officials are trying to identify a man whose photograph was found in a time capsule that was encased in the wall of the Saskatchewan legislature.

"What we came upon after going through the time capsule contents is a picture of a gentlemen that we have no record of who he is," said Kevin Doherty, minister responsible for the Provincial Capital Commission.

"We have some theories as to who he might be. But what we're asking the people of Saskatchewan ... if they know who this gentleman might be, to perhaps contact us and let us know who he is, what his role was in the construction of the legislative building back in 1909 and any stories that they provide us with respect to him and his family and whatnot."

The capsule was opened last December to mark the building's 100th anniversary.

The legislature officially opened in October 1912, although the time capsule was laid in 1909 during construction.

The items were put in the capsule by the governor general at the time, Earl Grey, and then-premier Walter Scott.

Doherty said officials think the man could be Franklin Joseph Robinson, a bureaucrat with the government at the time.

But no one is certain.

"I suppose we could all posit theories as to what might have happened here. But I suspect this gentleman might have put it in there after all the activities were done, the dignitaries had left and (he) said, 'Well, I want to be part of history as well,'" said Doherty.

"I don't know, and that's why we're asking the people if they have any ideas or theories or know this gentleman or are descendants of this gentleman's family to come forward and maybe they know exactly what took place back then."

Police chief opens ears to aboriginals on racial profiling

Members of the aboriginal community in Saskatoon who feel they have been racially profiled by the Saskatoon Police Service (SPS) will soon have a chance to tell the chief of police their stories.

This Saturday, Kim Beaudin, the president of the Aboriginal Affairs Coalition of Saskatchewan — who raised the initial concerns of racial profiling to the city's Board of Police Commissioners — will host an event where members of the aboriginal community can tell the SPS of instances where they felt racially profiled, in an attempt to bring this issue to light.

"There will be a number of people who want to speak out on the issue," said Beaudin. "I've sparked a lot of interest and what I've been trying to explain to people is they need to make sure to tell their stories and this is their opportunity to let the chief of police know this is happening."

Beaudin said the event will also serve as an opportunity

"They don't understand the process — they understand that the process to complain is daunting, but they don't understand the basic process," said Beaudin. "We believe this is one of the steps that's needed to address this issue."

"We want to work with police to make sure everyone is educated."

Police Chief Clive Weighill said he feels the event is a move in the right direction to strengthen the relationship between the SPS and the aboriginal community.

"If we're having some concerns, I think it's always best to face them head on, discuss them and find some kind of resolution," said Weighill, adding he's prepared to hear people's stories of when they felt they were racially profiled.

"I'll certainly hear their concerns and I'll advise them if there has been an act of misconduct by one of our officers — the route to take to make a proper complaint."

Weighill said a good relationship with the aboriginal community is a "top priority" for the SPS.

"I see it as another step to maintain and improve the relationship that we're forming," said Weighill. "If there are some concerns, I certainly want to hear about them — we can only improve our services if we hear about the complaint."

The meeting will be held at St. Thomas Wesley United Church starting at 12 p.m.

Dingo really did take baby, says coroner

Mystery. It took four inquests, 32 years to clear mother accused of killing her daughter

Australians have overwhelmingly welcomed the final chapter of a mystery that has captivated the country for 32 years: Did a dingo really take a baby that vanished from an Outback campsite in 1980?

A country that was once bitterly divided on whether baby Azaria Chamberlain had been dragged away by a wild dog or murdered by her mother now largely agrees that the parents deserve the vindication a coroner's court provided Tuesday.

A day after Azaria Chamberlain would have turned 32, a coroner found that a dingo had taken her as a nine-week-old baby from a tent near Ayers Rock, the red monolith now known as Uluru.

ton and her ex-husband, Michael Chamberlain, teared up as the findings of the fourth inquest into their daughter's disappearance were broadcast from a courtroom in Darwin to televisions around Australia.

The first inquest in 1981 had blamed a dingo but a second inquest charged Chamberlain-Creighton with murder. A third inquest in 1995 left the cause of death open. The case became famous through the movie A Cry in the Dark.

Beached whale dies on B.C. coast

People gather around a beached humpback whale that died during low tide and was found tangled in fishing net in White Rock, just south of Vancouver, on Tuesday. Paul Cottrell, the Department of Fisheries and Oceans' marine mammal co-ordinator, said the severely emaciated young whale was first spotted as water receded from the sandy tidal flats early Tuesday morning. Cottrell said the eight- to 10-metre-long juvenile died just hours after beaching itself. "It had been struggling for a long time and likely hadn't been eating for a long time," he said. "There may be other underlying issues regarding the animal's health as well as the fishing gear." He said experts will try to identify the whale from the patterns on its tail fluke.

Bombardier shares surge on massive business-jet order

Major deal. NetJets Inc., a Warren Buffett company, signed the deal to buy up to 275 Bombardier Challengers — worth up to $7.3 billion US

Bombardier Inc. shares soared in trading Tuesday following a major deal with one of renowned billionaire investor Warren Buffett's companies, which is poised to buy up to $9.6 billion worth of business jets and services.

Private jet company NetJets Inc. signed a deal Monday to buy up to 275 Bombardier Challenger business jets that could be worth up to $7.3 billion US. There are 100 firm orders and options on 175 more.

Bombardier said it has also signed a 15-year service and maintenance agreement for the aircraft valued at as much as an additional $2.3 billion if all options are exercised.

Bombardier shares gained more than six per cent, or 22 cents, to close at $3.87 on heavy volume of more than 21.2 million shares on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

"This purchase demonstrates our long-term planning and represents our ongoing commitment to providing unparalleled safety and service in aircraft uniquely customized for our owners," NetJets chairman and CEO Jordan Hansell said in a statement.

"We are confident that NetJets' market leadership and strong foundation position us to make long-term investments in our business to differentiate our fleet in ways that no one else in the industry can."

NetJets is a unit of Berkshire Hathaway Inc., Buffett's main company.

The deal includes 75 firm orders and 125 options for the Challenger 300 Series aircraft as well as 25 firm orders and 50 options for the larger Challenger 605 Series aircraft. The firm orders are worth $2.6 billion based on 2012 list prices.

The order follows a deal earlier this year that saw NetJets order up to 120 of Bombardier's Global business jets in a deal worth as much as $6.7 billion US. Deliveries are already expected to increase this year and in 2013. The first Challenger 300 will be delivered in 2014 while the first larger Challenger 605 will be delivered in 2015.

"The market has been aware that Bombardier was a contender for the NetJets mid-size jet order, but the magnitude of the order is likely much larger than market expectations," said Cameron Doerksen of National Bank Financial.

Doerksen said Bombardier undoubtedly offered volume discounts but standardized systems and interiors will lead to lower production costs and consequently margins that are in line with smaller orders.

Airlines battle with ticketing firms over new booking systems

A passenger uses a self-check-in kiosk in Atlanta. Extra legroom, special meals, access to the VIP lounge — and tickets to a musical? Airlines want to raise new revenues by selling such extras alongside tickets and are locked in battle with three companies that dominate the bookings industry over the introduction of a new global reservation system. Carriers complain the current system is a costly 1970s throwback without Internet-era convenience. They want to cut out the global ticket-booking systems — Sabre Holdings, Travelport Ltd. and Amadeus IT Group — that some reject as obsolete middlemen who add costs. Bookings companies retort that they have invested to upgrade services and are working hard to meet carriers' needs.

BEAUTY IS WHAT'S BEHIND YOUR NEXT RAISE

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca/justsaying

When Maria Sharapova won the French Open on Saturday, it was another victory for the Beautiful People.

Sharapova, all six-foot-two of her, is gorgeous. But then, so are a lot of tennis players these days. Somewhere along the line, right at Anna Kournikova, perhaps, it became important for female tennis players to be beautiful as well as talented.

Partial list: Daniela Hantuchova, Sabine Lisicki, Vera Zvonareva, Lucie Safarova, Maria Kirilenko, Simona Halep, Tatiana Golovin, as well as the aforementioned Kournikova and Sharapova. Apparently, it doesn't hurt if you're eastern European either.

One honest BBC producer has admitted that "babes and Brits" get the centre-court treatment at Wimbledon while less attractive players have to grunt it out on the outer courts.

But that's the way of the world. If you're gorgeous, you're golden.

Daniel Hamermesh, a professor at the University of Texas in Austin and author of Beauty Pays, estimates that, in a lifetime, a bad-looking person can earn $230,000 less than a good-looking person, all other things being equal.

The truth about looking good is out there.

In the job market: Attractive people get more job recommendations, are considered more qualified, more likely to succeed, more likely to be hired, paid more, promoted more and less likely to be fired.

In the courts: Juries think physically attractive people are less likely to be guilty. Attractive people get lower bail, lighter sentences and smaller fines. Except maybe not Luka Magnotta. But imagine how much trouble he'd be in if he was really ugly?

In school: Attractive people get better grades.

On Facebook: Attractive people are more "friended" than ugly people.

Sex: Attractive people get more dates, have more sex and even have more orgasms.

OK, too much information, perhaps. Good thing I'm attractive. Did I mention that generally, men tend to overestimate their good looks? Women go the opposite way. More than eight out of 10 hate the way they look in a mirror. One study showed women see themselves as fatter after eating a single chocolate bar. It would have to be a 35,000-calorie chocolate bar for that to be true.

Hamermesh (whose wife thinks he looks average) finds that 70 per cent of people agree on what's attractive most of the time. It has to do with symmetry. The more symmetrical you look, the more attractive you are. Jug ears are out.

So that "beauty is in the eye of the beholder" stuff is fine ... just as long as you're beautiful.

Have a nice day, and if possible, stay away from mirrors. They're bad luck, in more ways than one.

Grammy producer discusses Houston doc

Producers of the 54th Grammy Awards have created a documentary showing how they adapted to the news of Whitney Houston's death less than 24 hours before the live telecast.

A Death in the Family: The Show Must Go On premiered Monday at the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences' headquarters in Los Angeles.

Ken Ehrlich, who has produced the Grammy Awards for the past 32 years, introduced the film and participated in a panel discussion afterward with Recording Academy president Neil Portnow, Grammy host LL Cool J, musician Dave Grohl and others.

LL Cool J said addressing the Grammy audience after Houston's death was "the most challenging moment I've faced in my career."

The 25-minute film can be seen on Grammy.com and at the Grammy Museum.

Fantasy reflects reality. Like other films in the genre, this Shankman effort draws heavily on how rock stars live their lives

IN FOCUS

In Rock of Ages Tom Cruise plays superstar Stacee Jaxx. He's Ozzy Osbourne with Axl Rose's attitude and Prince's trademarked revealing chaps, a spicy stew of rebellion, decadence and Jack Daniels.

The first time we see Jaxx in the film he's on a round bed, buried under several scantily clad women. It's a memorable first look at the character, but it's not exactly an original one.

Director Adam Shankman admits that the idea came from a similar scene — featuring KISS singer Paul Stanley — in the heavy metal documentary The Decline of Western Civilization Part II: The Metal Years.

It's not the first time a music movie has taken its cue from real rock life.

For a year before shooting playing Jim Morrison in The Doors Val Kilmer immersed himself in the singer's life, wearing his clothes and spending time at the Lizard King's favorite Sunset Strip bars.

Despite the film's many factual errors — drummer

John Densmore claims "A third of it is fiction" — the recording studio scene where Jim smashes a TV is true, and even Jim's disgruntled ex-band mates said they couldn't distinguish Kilmer's voice from the real Morrison's.

The Doors weren't the only musicians fooled by an actor.

Joan Jett was annoyed that Kristen Stewart wore leather pants when playing her in The Runaways — it would have been more authentic if she had worn jeans she said — but she was impressed with Stewart's voice. When she first heard a recording of the actress belting out one of her songs she thought it was actually a tape of her old band.

Sex Pistols' singer Johnny Rotten dismissed Sid and

Big-time show

Some facts about the Rock of Ages movie:

- Decisions. Will Ferrell and Steve Carrell were considered for Alec Baldwin's role; and Taylor Swift was considered for Julianne Hough's.
- Location. The film was shot in Fort Lauderdale, Florida.
- Big budget. It cost more than $70 million to make.

Nancy — the story of Sid Vicious's life and death — as "mere fantasy" but Gary Oldham bought at least one authentic bit of Sid to the film by wearing the bass player's real chain necklace in several scenes. Sid's mom gave the actor the necklace to wear during filming.

Just as Shankman and Cruise borrowed from The Decline of Western Civilization, the Bob Dylan doc Don't Look Back has inspired scenes in movies such as Bob Roberts and I'm Not There.

The mockumentary Walk Hard: The Dewey Cox Story parodies the movie in a press conference scene when a reporter compares Dewey to Dylan. "Why doesn't anyone ask Bob Dylan why he sounds so much like Dewey Cox?" Dewey replies, echoing Dylan's response to a reporter who likened Dylan to singer-songwriter Donovan.

Crime pays for Boardwalk Empire's Winter

In the know. A lifelong interest in, and a close-up view of, crime allows former Sopranos writer to be incredibly accurate

Terence Winter has always had criminal leanings but fortunately the creator of the critically acclaimed Boardwalk Empire channelled his lifelong obsession into something good.

Boardwalk Empire is a period drama starring Steve Buscemi, focusing on Enoch "Nucky" Thompson, a political figure who rose to prominence and controlled Atlantic City, New Jersey, during the Prohibition period of the 1920s and 1930s.

It has been renewed for a third season.

The inspiration that has driven him to spend much of his career writing about criminals — he was also a major writer on The Sopranos — came from an unexpected place.

"I'm always interested in criminals and crime. People ask me how this started and aside from growing up in Brooklyn in an area that kind of has a long history in mob type behaviour I could point it to the movie version of Oliver Twist," Winter said with a chuckle at the Banff World Media Festival. He is also listed as a writer and executive producer of the show.

"I remember I was a kid growing fascinated with pickpocketing — that was the subplot — Fagin and his pickpockets in that underground gang. A year later the Sting came out and it was all about con men and I became interested in that."

Winter, 51, also worked in a butcher shop that turned out to be owned by Paul Castellano, who was then the head of the powerful Gambino crime family.

"I got to rub elbows with guys not unlike the people who were in the Sopranos and just saw how they thought and how they talked and how they operated. It was just a world I was familiar with and was comfortable writing about."

Winter was an executive producer for The Sopranos and wrote or co-wrote 25 episodes over the HBO series' six-year run.

Zac and Lily's romance 'fizzled'

After three months of dating, Zac Efron and Mirror Mirror star Lily Collins have called it quits, according to Us Weekly.

"They're no longer together. They were never serious, though; it was just a casual thing and it fizzled," a source says. "They were never in the same place at the same time."

Perhaps a sign that the relationship didn't have legs was the fact that during those times apart, Efron didn't make much mention of Collins.

"Zac was never very serious about her. He didn't talk about her to friends," another source says.

Travel in brief

On a trip? Read a book

If you want to get in the mood for your next Canadian trip, you can try reading a book about the destination. A new resource makes that a whole lot easier. The 49th Shelf, a project of the Association of Canadian Publishers, has developed an interactive online map showing books connected with particular places. The Read Local map — at 49thshelf.com/map — includes books linked to towns, cities and rural areas in every province and territory, and in genres from poetry and fiction to autobiographies and cookbooks. The 49th Shelf calls it a “100-mile reading diet for the mind.” Plenty of discoveries are waiting to be made for travellers who like to read. Click on Vancouver and learn about Hold Me Now, a 2011 novel by Stephen Gauer about a murder in Stanley Park. For Winnipeg, there's the 2007 novel Shelf Monkey by Corey Redekop, set entirely in that city. Heading to New Brunswick? You might be interested in Wicked Woods by Steve Vernon, a 2008 collection of ghost stories from the province. Foodies planning a trip to Newfoundland and Labrador can discover Fat-Back & Molasses by Ivan Jespersion, a 1974 collection of old recipes.

Instead of cedar, try pineapple bark for your grilled chicken

Pineapple Bark Chicken with Grilled Pineapple and Guacamole

This recipe serves three. MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Using pineapple bark in the same way you would use a cedar plank to grill, infuses the meat with a delicate sweetness, and keeps it moist and juicy. The enzymes in the pineapple also help to tenderize the meat.

1. Cut off the top and bottom of the pineapple. These can be discarded. Stand the pineapple upright. Cut the skin off the pineapple, removing it in 6 long strips. To do this, begin cutting at the top of the fruit and slice downward, letting the knife follow the curve of the fruit. Leave about 1/2 inch of flesh on each strip of skin. Rotate the fruit and repeat. Set aside.

2. Place each chicken breast between sheets of plastic wrap and use a meat mallet to pound to an even 1/2 inch thickness. Season each on both sides with salt, pepper, cumin and cayenne. Lay each piece of chicken over the cut side of one of the slices of pineapple skin. Set a second strip of pineapple skin, cut side down, on top. Use kitchen twine to tie the bundles to hold them together. Refrigerate the chicken bundles for about 30 minutes.

3. When ready to cook, heat one side of the grill to high, the other side to low.

4. Meanwhile, cut the skinned pineapple (the flesh) into thick circles. Use a small round cookie or biscuit cutter (or a paring knife) to cut out and discard the core from each round.

5. When grill is hot, arrange chicken bundles on the cooler side of the grill. Cook for 15 minutes per side, or until the chicken reaches 165 F at the centre. During the final 10 minutes, add the pineapple rings and cook for 5 minutes per side.

6. Guacamole: In bowl combine red onion, jalapeno, avocados, lime juice and cilantro. Gently mix then season with salt and pepper.

7. To serve, place one chicken bundle on each plate. Set a grilled pineapple ring next to it, then spoon some of the guacamole into the centre of and over the pineapple ring.

Workplace Law

You think you know, but you have no idea

WORKPLACE LAW
Daniel Lublin
dan@canadaemploymentlawyer.com
Twitter: @danlublin

Most employees cling to beliefs about workplace rights they gleaned from media, friends or researching online. But many of these "perceived" rights often do not exist. Here are some of my favourite misconceptions:

Discrimination means unequal treatment

It is not discrimination if you are simply treated unfairly or differently. Discrimination laws only protect differential treatment based on a defined set of personal characteristics, such as age, race, gender or disability. Employees can be treated differently based on any other grounds, without any form of legal protection. Similarly, there is no

You're the best!

"[An employer] is entitled to show favouritism, as long as its decision is not based on personal characteristics, such as race, religion or gender."

legal requirement that promotions or bonuses be assessed fairly. An employer may decide, often arbitrarily, who it wishes to promote and how it will compensate its employees. It is entitled to show favouritism, as long as its decision is not based on personal characteristics, such as race, religion or gender.

An employee is entitled to overtime pay for any additional hours worked.

Unless an employment contract states otherwise, overtime pay is only required for hours worked in excess of the statutory standards, which vary among provinces. Many employees do not realize that they can be required to work for longer than nine to five, without an entitlement to overtime pay.

There is a right to sick leave

There is no statutory or legal requirement to provide employees with paid time off from work due to an illness. Although many employers have policies that do provide a few days' sick leave each year, it is not because they are compelled to do so. Without such a policy, if an employee is off work and sick, she need not be paid for that time.

If I work through lunch, I can leave work early

This is one of my favourite misconceptions. Employees often believe they can make up lost time or "trade" a break or lunch for an early departure. However, most provincial employment standards laws require that a 30-minute lunch be taken, at least, every five hours. Therefore, even if an employer were to agree to such a "trade" (and few would do so), it would still be illegal.

LeBron James, still chasing his first NBA title in his third MVP season, shined through three quarters and blew past Durant head-to-head several times before the Thunder switched their defence.

James ended up with 30 points — the most he's ever had in three trips to the finals — but it wasn't enough with Durant taking over late.

Durant made six of 10 shots in the fourth quarter to power the Thunder ahead after they had trailed until their final possession of the third quarter.

Euro 2012. Polish defence largely muzzled Russian attack

Alan Dzagoev scored his third goal of the European Championship, and Jakub Blaszczykowski scored what will surely be one of the goals of the tournament.

Russia and Poland played out a 1-1 draw Tuesday. The result left Russia at the top of Group A, but all four teams still have a chance to qualify for the quarter-finals.

Russia continued to push forward after the goal, allowing Poland to equalize on the counter in the 57th when Blaszczykowski cut in from the right and sent a searing left-foot drive into the far corner of the goal.

Violence

Fans clash outside game

Soccer hooligans clashed with opposing fans and police before and during Poland's game against bitter rival Russia on Tuesday, leaving 15 injured while more than 140 people were detained.

Following scattered fighting in the Polish capital before the match, police fired rubber bullets at a group of fans who attacked them with bottles and stones near an outdoor fan zone in central Warsaw where about 75,000 people were watching the game on huge screens.

None of the injured, which included a police officer, were in life-threatening condition.

About 5,000 Russian fans marched to the match at the National Stadium to celebrate the Russia Day national holiday.

It was seen as provocative to many Poles. The two countries share a difficult history, including decades of control by Moscow over Poland during the Cold War. Many Poles felt authorities shouldn't have allowed the Russians to march as a group in Warsaw given the historical wounds.

One of the most violent incidents occurred during the march. Polish hooligans attacked Russians. The two sides, made up of dozens of men, kicked and beat each other in the face, while flares could be seen exploding in their midst.

Before the match, the Czech fans booed their coach. Six minutes after the start, they could barely contain their joy.

After an embarrassing 4-1 opening loss to Russia at the European Championship, the Czechs attacked right from kickoff and scored two quick goals en route to a 2-1 victory over Greece on Tuesday.

"Everything worked for us tonight," Czech Republic coach Michal Bilek said. "I am happy with every player."

Petr Jiracek scored the first goal, beating Greece goalkeeper Costas Chalkias in the third minute after a pass from Tomas Hub-schmann sliced through the Greek defence. Vaclav Pilar added the second three minutes later with his second goal of the tournament. He was first to a ball sent across the goal by teammate Theodor Gebre Selassie.

"This was a big goal for me, and it's great for the team," Pilar said.

Substitute Fanis Gekas pulled one back for Greece in 53rd minute with a tap in after Chelsea goalkeeper Petr Cech spilled the ball and bumped into defender Tomas Sivok.

But the Greeks rallied too late, and their chances of advancing were hurt following their 1-1 draw with Poland in the opening Group A match.

The Czechs, however, put their bid to reach for the quarter-finals back on track.

Portuguese boss trusts forward

Portugal coach Paulo Bento is keeping faith with striker Helder Postiga, even though it could cost him his job.

Portugal has scored only once in its four matches this year, and Postiga didn't even manage a shot on goal in the team's 1-0 loss to Germany at the European Championship.

Cassano sorry for making gay remark

Italy forward Antonio Cassano said Tuesday that he hopes there are no homosexual players on the national team at Euro 2012, then used a derogatory word to describe gays.

After being told by a reporter there might be undeclared gay players on the team, Cassano said: "That's their problem, but I hope not.... But I don't know."

He added that he hoped his answer sufficed. "Because if not, you know I'll be attacked from every direction."

Several hours after his initial remarks, Italy released an apology statement from Cassano. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Electric facts

- Electricity is used as soon as it's made, and large-scale storage is prohibitively expensive and impractical. Smaller-scale storage, such as electric car batteries, is one possible solution to heavy demand at certain times of the day.

- Electric vehicle batteries that are too depleted to run a car still have considerable capacity, and research is underway to possibly use them for stationary power storage.

The power's out? Plug your house into your electric car

Few things are more annoying than the power going out. But in the future, your lights could come back on, thanks to the car in your driveway.

Nissan recently demonstrated its Vehicle-to-Home (V2H) system, which uses the battery in the all-electric Leaf hatchback to provide power during outages, as well as offset expensive peak-hour electricity or even sell some back to the grid.

V2H is still in its infancy here, and faces considerable research and test projects before it could be available to consumers, but a version will go on sale in Japan later this month.

"As the grid grows and gets smarter, and as infrastructure comes on line, the consumer's going to look for alternatives and flexibility," says Allen Childs, president of Nissan Canada.

"This adds value in that it's a supply source to the home when the normal supply is interrupted."

V2H requires a special Power Control System, or PCS, provided by Nissan and wired into the house's electrical panel. When the Leaf is plugged in, the PCS charges the car's battery from the house current, just as happens now with the conventional house charger sold with the Leaf.

When the house needs power, though, the PCS reverses the direction, and electricity flows from the Leaf's battery into the house system. Nissan says that a fully charged Leaf could run a typical house for a day.

Many Leaf owners charge their vehicles at night, when electricity is cheaper.

Potentially, some of the car's stored power could be "mixed in" with electricity from the utility company during peak periods when power is expensive, reducing the overall cost. Nissan also envisions a "smart grid" communicating with cars during periods of heavy use, "asking" them to sell their inexpensive stored electricity back to the utility company at peak-rate prices.

So how do you drive your electric car, if you've used or sold its stored charge? This is where driver, car, and grid will have to work together.

The driver programs in what she'll need — say, 60 kilometres for the day's commute. The car could use or sell its excess power, but stop before cutting into that 60-km range of battery power.

It takes about seven hours to fully charge the Leaf with its household charger, but a quick-charge DC system can provide up to 80 per cent capacity in 30 minutes. If these expensive DC units drop in price and become more widespread, drivers could also use or sell the battery's power at peak rates, and later plug in half an hour before the car is needed again.
